For over 80 years, local businesses as well as nationally recognized brands have turned to a single source to market their products and services to the affluent Long Island, New York market: Newsday.

Today, Newsday has evolved from a multigenerational newspaper to a multimedia powerhouse – engaging its audience 24/7, 365 across all platforms: digital, video, podcast, mobile, social, experiential events, virtual programs, creative, production and print.

Neighbor, watchdog, small business supporter and local community advocate, Newsday reaches nearly half of all households on Long Island. With over a 1 million weekly audience, Newsday’s multimedia content is internationally recognized and has been honored with 19 Pulitzer Prizes for award-winning journalism and unsurpassed, hyper-local Long Island news coverage.
Long Island

An Important Market within the New York Market

The largest island in the contiguous United States, Long Island is home to nearly 3 million residents and some of the most affluent areas in the country. A suburb of New York City, Long Island’s two counties, Nassau and Suffolk, are the most densely populated and second-most populous counties in New York State outside of New York City.

Education is an important part of Long Island life. Over 15 colleges and universities welcome over 100,000 students to LI campuses. High school students often feature prominently as winners of the Intel International Science and Engineering Fair and similar STEM-based academic awards. Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory in the Town of Oyster Bay, the Brookhaven National Laboratory in the Town of Brookhaven, and the Old Westbury campus of New York Institute of Technology are globally prominent life sciences research institutions.

The Island also plays a prominent role in American business, with growing workforces in health and education, technology and manufacturing, business services and hospitality. While ninety percent of the area’s workforce is small business, Long Island is also the headquarters to some of the best-known publicly traded companies.

By John Paraskevas

A desire to help feed home bound veterans has grown into activity for a full-time mission.

The Stonybrook president’s effort that started five months ago with just himself and a handful of recipe writers has become Cooking for Long Island Veterans, an organization with 20 volunteers making and delivering weekly home-cooked meals to nearly 40 former service members from Albeeson to Westhampton.

“It’s just grown so much, it’s turned into a full-time job,” she said.

Sylvester, 55, who laugh at home economics in the East Islip school district, has helped students pack care packages for overseas.
