Choosing the Best Summer Program for Your Child

With winter weather in full force, summer recess may seem far away. But now is actually the best time to research summer camps and learning programs, and secure your space. Selecting the best options may be challenging, given the many exciting and diverse choices available for kids of all ages and interests offered in Nassau and Suffolk counties in Summer 2019.

The suggestions below offer insights and information to help make the summer camp process easier – and ensure that your child will truly be a “happy camper!”

- Talk With Your Child – Ask about his/her interests and expectations for summer vacation, and share your expectations, too. The answers may surprise you and may create options you hadn't considered before. Narrow your search to camps and programs that are best matched to your child's interests.
- Sleepaway Camp vs. Day Camp – Both offer a variety of programs with interest-specific determine if it would be a good match for your child. Be sure to check online reviews and testimonials, talk with friends and family, and if necessary, speak with the camp staff about any questions or concerns you may have.

- Attend Open Houses – Once you determine who the top camps on your list are, make plans to attend their open house events – many of which will be taking place over the next few weeks. Bring your child along and ask questions such as: How is the staff screened and trained? What is the camper-to-counselor ratio? What is a typical day like? How do you handle homesickness? And, what type of child succeeds at the camp?

Prepare for the Future with Pre-College Summer Learning

High school students can give themselves an academic advantage by enrolling in pre-college level courses during the summer months, available at colleges and universities throughout Long Island. Aside from acquiring college-level credits, there are a number of benefits a summer class affords, including:

TIME IS ON YOUR SIDE
Since summer classes tend to be shorter in duration, high schoolers can better their academic records and still have plenty of time to enjoy the season.

EXPERIENCE COLLEGE
High schoolers will have a chance to explore the campus when it's less crowded – including the book shop, student center, library, fitness center, and dormitories.

MORE ATTENTION
Summer classes are usually smaller in size than courses held during the Fall and Spring semesters, which means that professors can provide more individualized attention to each student.

EASES THE COLLEGE SELECTION PROCESS
Summer students can use the time on campus to determine if the school (or type of school) is one that they can see themselves attending in the future. Campus size, areas of specialty, campus life, clubs and activities, etc. can all be explored.

MEET NEW FRIENDS
Taking pre-college courses also creates opportunities to meet new friends – many that share the same interests. These new friendships can help make studying easier and summer classes more fun.

To learn more about summer pre-college classes on Long Island, visit college websites or speak with your high school's guidance counselors.

LONG ISLAND SUMMER CAMPS. EVERYTHING YOU NEED TO KNOW.

When it comes to summer camps, Long Island has an abundance of riches: traditional day camps, sports camps, drama camps, aquatic camps, horseback-riding camps, travel camps, STEM camps, sleepaway camps, special needs camps ... the list goes on and on.

Newsday's Camp Finder (newsday.com/campfinder) compiles information and photos for more than 120 options to make it easy for parents to narrow their search for the perfect summer experience for their children. Navigate camps by county or search by special interests.
